The Reporter

Who she is: Tara Rogers, freshman, North Penn swimming

What she's done: Rogers won two individual events and was on two first place relays last Saturday at the Suburban One League Continental Conference Girls Championships at North Penn's Rick Carroll Natatorium.

Rogers hit the wall in a time of 54.35 to win the 100 free, while the freshman Maidens' time of 25.14 earned her first pace in the 500 free. She anchored the North Penn 200 medley relay that won the event with a time of 1:53.01 and also led off on the Maidens' 400 free relay that claimed gold with a mark of 3:39.96. The finishes helped North Penn win the meet with 440 points.

t What she said: "You keep working hard at practice, and eventually you're gonna see results," said Rogers last Saturday. "Once we start tapering, it's gonna be good for the team."

What North Penn coach Matt Weiser said: "She swam great," said Weiser of Rogers last Saturday. "It's nice because she has a lot of room to improve too."

t What's next: Rogers and North Penn competes in the District One Championships March 4-5 at La Salle University.

Honorable Mention: Rachel Saunders (Central Bucks West diving) scored a 417.25 to place third at the SOL Continental Diving Championship last Thursday; Gabby Becattini (Methacton indoor track) won the triple jump (37' 9") last Friday at the Meet of Champions at Lehigh University; Meghan McGovern (North Penn indoor track) set a school record in winning the 3,000 meters (10:08.62) at the Meet of Champions.
